10 of the best Italian restaurants in Rome

Silvia Marchetti, CNN • Updated 16th November 2017

(CNN) — One thing that should be eternal about the Eternal City is great Italian food. But that doesn't mean pizza Napoli or pasta marinara every night when you're in Rome.

These 10 restaurants range from a cozy trattoria through an experimental bistro to the city's most Michelin star-spangled establishment.

What do they have in common? Not spaghetti bolognese on the kids' menu. They're all highly regarded for the Italian culinary niche they serve.

Michelin stars -- more than any other restaurant in the city.

Eating here is as much a theatrical as a culinary experience. But the showmanship shows off the cooking. Serving "The Sea," Beck's signature dish, a waiter pours a "wave" of seafood broth over a freeze-dried "rock" of scampi claws and potato, which then dissolves into the "seabed" of barnacles, white shrimp and Venus clams.

The oldest bottle on the wine list dates to 1888, and there's a water menu with 29 choices -- try asking for "the tap." Meals from $133 (€125).

2. Antica Pesa

"One of Rome's most loved restaurants by the international jet set," is how the Italian food guide Gambero Rosso describes this chic trattoria. Robert De Niro and Madonna are among the members of that illustrious group pictured in attendance on the restaurant's walls.

Apart from the opportunities for star-spotting, it's the subtly modernized traditional
