The lovey-dovey pair arrived “hand-in-hand around 10 p.m., with a bodyguard,” a spy said. “They got the best table in the romantically lit garden.”

Earlier they’d been sightseeing at the Colosseum. “They were super cute,” said our Italian spy. “You could see a sparkle in their eyes . . . and he was smiling ear-to-ear the whole time.”

The pair dined on cacio e pepe, fish, steak and dessert. The next day, the two toured the Altare della Patria and the Pantheon, where the NBA star was seen in baggy white shorts, a sleeveless T-shirt and white-and-neon sneakers. Brinson chose black workout wear.

A source said King James and his queen were also expected to see the Vatican and Piazza Navona.

James was overheard at Antica Pesa telling its owners he’d hit their Brooklyn location when the Heat next play the Nets.
